

BUILDING STRENGTH
changing lives

March 2018

Dear Allied Health Professionals,

I have great news to share with you! The Association for Creatine Deficiencies (ACD) is hosting an International Scientific and Patient Conference for Cerebral Creatine Deficiency Syndrome (CCDS) on July 27th and 28th, 2018, in Austin, Texas.

This conference will be the first of its kind and will bring together members of the scientific, medical, and research communities, along with each of the deficiencies GAMT, AGAT and CTD families, in one location to learn and join efforts on the advancements of CCDS.

On behalf of the ACD Board of Directors, it is our honor and privilege to invite you to this exciting event. This symposium is an excellent opportunity to meet leading experts in the field of CCDS.

This year's "Innovation through Collaboration" Scientific Forum will be held on July 27th and include sessions regarding: The Science of Creatine Metabolism, CCDS Introduction and Indicators, and CCDS Corrective Measures. The format will consist of lectures, oral presentation of abstracts, and panel discussions with Q & A.

It is the mission of the ACD to advocate, educate and promote research for patients and families coping with the effects of a CCDS. We believe that it is imperative to host such meetings to further this mission and to unite knowledge of the diseases across the globe.

If your institution or organization is unable to cover the cost associated with travel, accommodations, and registration, the ACD has set up scholarships to help fund these fees. Please feel free to contact me regarding any needs or any questions.

To register, please visit www.creatineinfo.org/symposium.

We look forward to seeing you in Austin for a great day of shared knowledge and productivity.

Sincerely,

Kim Tuminello, Director of Advocacy
